1.28 p54 Exercise 3

It was a hot African day and I stopped to have a rest under a tree. I took off my hat and put it down on the ground. Then I lay down and I soon fell asleep. While I was asleep, a monkey took my hat. When I woke up, I put out my hand to pick up my hat, but it wasn't there. Then I heard a noise in the tree above me. I looked up and I saw the monkey. It was holding my hat. I started to climb up the tree but the monkey just jumped up to a higher branch, so I gave up and climbed down the tree again. I sat down to think, and I noticed that the monkey sat down, too. I stood up and the monkey stood up, too. 'Ah-hah,' I thought. I put my hand in my pocket, took out a handkerchief and put it on my head. The monkey put on my hat, too. Then I took off the handkerchief, and the monkey took off the hat. Then I threw down the handkerchief on the ground. The monkey threw down my hat. When the hat landed on the ground, I quickly bent down and picked it up. Then I put it on and walked away. After a while, I looked back. The monkey was still sitting in the tree.
